

Philosophy at Grantchester, 2010

An invitation to the first of this summer's Grantchester talks.

Philosophy and A Brain of Two Halves

10 am to Noon on Sat 8th May 2010

at

Tea Room at The Orchard, Grantchester

Speaker: John De Val

The two halves of our brain 'think' in very different ways. Which one is dominant at any particular moment has a significant impact on how we see the world we live in. Some recent publications offer fascinating insights in this area. This talk will consider these insights and their implications for living a happy and useful life.

The lecture is open to all and free of charge.

The Orchard Tea Rooms can be reached by taking Junction 12 off the M11, following the signs to Grantchester and turning left off the road to Trumpington. Be careful; the entrance is very easy to pass.
