JUSTICE AND EQUITY

‘Why our laws matter and the future of English law’

A talk by Peter Linstead

10 am Saturday 25 February 2012
11 Mandeville Place, London W1U 3AJ

In the fourth in the Justice and Equity series of talks, Peter Linstead asks why we should care about our civil and criminal legal system and the people running it, and considers what kind of shape it is in, to meet the challenges of the 21st century, including terrorism, riots and European harmonisation.

Peter Linstead is a practising barrister who has worked across the spectrum of different areas of law, now specialising in employment law. He lectures widely, both to fellow professionals and the public.

Entrance free. All most welcome.
